“ When Karla was my best friend in elementary school, we would spend time at each other's house. I remember thinking Mrs. Kennedy was the June Clever of our time! She was so beautiful and always so well dressed. She seemed more refined and proper than other moms I knew. One day Karla and I were in the den and Mrs. Kennedy came into the room wearing a girdle. It was the first time I'd ever seen one. I asked her if it was comfortable and she said, "not at all." I then asked why she wore it if it was uncomfortable and she paused then answered, "so my pants will fit". It's been over 30 years, but I still remember the lesson that beauty, refinement, and class take effort. My condolences to Karla and her father and the friends that have lost a special lady in their lives.,

“ I look toward the day I will see my friend again. Our friendship is not over. It has just been interrupted. When I see her soon in Heaven, everything good about our friendship will be made complete. The best part is yet to come. Knowing this truth does not take away the sadness. Saying goodbye in death is tough! But knowing our relationship will continue, knowing our friendship will be redeemed gives us hope. Because of Christ.,
