“ Irwin and I laughed when I called him my "step brother-in-law by marriage" but that's how it was. He was my father-in-law's step-son-in-law. Irwin was a wonderful, warm person, I never heard him say an unkind word about anyone, and I'd claim him as family no matter how distantly related. He has generously helped me with photos and stories from our Melvin and McMinn families in Mississippi and Arkansas. And I want to thank him here so anyone who reads this will know what a fine man they have in their family tree. As a young man, he worked in automotive parts and repairs, but he said the job he enjoyed most was his time as a "master chef" at the local bowling alley where his specialty of the house was red beans and rice. I think he just loved people, and working a job that brought him the happiness of making them happy. I will miss Irwin very, very much. He was a light in a lonely world.
